Referencing formats are discipline-specific. For an interdisciplinary course, consider the framework of your research. Choose one methodology and be consistent.

Keep a style guide handy!

---

American Psychological Association (APA)

References

---

Parreñas (2001) examines the power structures of gender, race, and class inherent in the unequal and illegal relationships between migrant domestic workers and their employers.

Moderated by class and assimilative policies, marriage between Aboriginal men and non-Aboriginal women was “[f]ar from being a travesty against society” (Ellinghaus, 2002, p. 69).
Works Cited

The author examines the power structures of gender, race, and class inherent in the unequal and illegal relationships between migrant domestic workers and their employers (Parreñas 10).

Moderated by class and assimilative policies, marriage between Aboriginal men and non-Aboriginal women was “[f]ar from being a travesty against society” (Ellinghaus 69).

Footnotes

The reference list is called a “Bibliography” and follows the same format as the MLA Works Cited (see above).

Parreñas examines the power structures of gender, race, and class inherent in the unequal and illegal relationships between migrant domestic workers and their employers.¹

Moderated by class and assimilative policies, marriage between Aboriginal men and non-Aboriginal women was “[f]ar from being a travesty against society.”²

² Ellinghaus 69.