Liz Scanlon, Public Relations

"... be open to fields and careers that you learn about as you go, and be creative in how you apply your skills to diverse areas....employers really do value a broad liberal arts education."

Hollie Devlin, Integrated Healthcare Communications Continuing Medical Education

"Take the time to be clear on what you are good at and like doing....often you can create the job you want. The advantage of formal education is not what you learn, but how you learn to think and analyze and respond to the world around you."

Barbara McDonald, Librarian

"Do what you enjoy. That's the best way to find a career. Do your homework. Interview people in a field you're considering. People who love their careers love to talk about their work!"
