

Board of Governors

Frequently Asked Questions

How often does the Board meet?

The full Board meets at least 6 times each year at the University (5 in Peterborough and 1 in Oshawa). Meeting days include ongoing in-service governor orientation, campus site visits and opportunities to have contact with the Trent community.

Board committees meet 4 – 6 times a year mainly in Peterborough, with a conference call service available if needed. Members of the Board may be required to sit on at least one committee over their term on the Board.

What is the role of the Board of Governors?

Like most universities, Trent has bicameral governance: a Senate (composed mainly of faculty, academic administrators and students) is the governing body responsible for educational policy, standards, and programs while the Board is responsible for the institution as a whole, its image, its finances, its property and its future.

The Board of Governors conducts its business through committees that bring recommendations to the full Board at regularly scheduled meetings. Board committees' mandates collectively address the University's property, revenues, expenditures, employees, business and affairs, as well as the workings of the Board of Governors itself.

What are the Board committees?

The Committees of the Trent University Board of Governors are:

- Audit & Investment Committee
- Executive Committee (and Human Resources Subcommittee)
- Finance and Property Committee
- Nominating & Governance Committee
- Trent Lands Committee

As well, there are a number of administrative committees within the University that have one or more seats reserved for Board members in any year.

External governors chair the standing committees of the Board and these assignments are rotated regularly. Committees meet 4 – 6 times a year mainly in Peterborough, with video conferencing available. The Executive Committee (composed of committee chairs, the officers of the Board and the President) meets as needed to act for the Board in emergencies between meetings, conducts presidential performance reviews and sets mandates for collective bargaining.

What are the responsibilities of governors?

Governors are expected to be ambassadors for Trent University. All are asked to make themselves and their expertise available to Trent as needed and to take part in University advocacy, advancement, stewardship and philanthropic activities. Governors must make judgements and decisions based on the best interests of the institution as a whole, even if that conflicts with their personal interests, or the interests of any particular constituency.

How much time should a Governor expect to commit to the Board?

Individuals contemplating joining this Board should be prepared initially to commit the equivalent of two weekdays per month for meeting attendance, as well as 6-10 hours for review of agenda materials. Additionally, governors receive invitations to University events that allow them to enjoy the social and ceremonial side of life at Trent. The University appreciates that Board volunteers may have other commitments.

What is the Board composition?

The Board is comprised of The President (ex officio), the Chancellor (ex officio), between 12-18 external appointees, 2 faculty, 2 staff, and 2 students. Appointments of external members are normally for three years, and they may be reappointed once for a total service of six years. Seats designated for faculty, staff, and students carry two year terms. Governors are volunteers and do not receive compensation.
