Graduate Bursaries

The bursary program for graduate students at Trent University is administrated by the School of Graduate Studies. Bursaries are meant to supplement, not replace, provincial government aid programs and a student's own resources. Bursaries are awarded each term to students with demonstrated financial need.

All graduate students are encouraged to apply for OSAP, Canada part time student loans, native band funding, or the government financial aid program of their home province.

Government programs may provide grants, which are funds that are not required to be paid back. Student grants generally exceed the bursary funds that the School of Graduate Studies provide.

Please reference the Graduate Studies Academic Calendar for additional award listings.

Bursary applications are posted on the MyTrent portal under the Finance Tab, each term during the first week of September, January and May with a deadline around the 28th of the same month.

Bursaries are assessed and finalized within 6-8 weeks.

Students should not rely on bursaries to finance their academics as they are intended to provide a small top up to a student’s own resources.
