1 Bedroom

$1,000 - $1,800/month

2 Bedroom

$1,700 - $2,500/month

3+ Bedroom

$2,400 - $3,500/month

Searching for Housing

Now that you have determined your housing priorities and your budget, you will need to start your housing search.

Internet & Social Networks

To find rental listings you can complete a housing search on the internet. There are several sites that you can visit including

- Places4Students
- Housing Resource Centre
- Kijiji
- Facebook

Some landlords might not advertise their vacancy. They rely on word of mouth to help fill their vacancy. Networking, social media groups and talking with others about housing rentals can be very helpful.

A Word on Scams

It's important to be aware of online scams. Some listings or conversations can seem too good to be true. Make sure you go to a view a unit before there is any exchange of money or personal information. The unit may look different in person then what was posted in the listing.

Steps to Find Housing

Step 1

Contacting a landlord

It is important to make a good first impression with a potential landlord. Use a formal email address and be considerate. Be prepared to provide the landlord with some basic information. Write down any questions you may have about the unit or location. It is very important to go and see the unit. This can prevent scams or fraudulent situations.

Step 2

Applying for units

If you are interested in a unit, the landlord will require you to complete a rental application. The application may include questions around past rentals, your current income, and basic information about you along with references. Create a list of good references that you can provide to your landlord. The landlord may also complete a credit check.

Step 3

Walk through

Now that you have signed a valid lease, it is important to walk through your unit or request a virtual tour with your landlord. This gives you an opportunity to document any issues in the unit. This documentation will save you time and money at the end of your tenancy as you have a record of the move-in conditions.

Step 4

Secure your unit

Once your landlord has accepted you as a tenant, it is important to sign a Standard lease. This is a contract that you are entering into with your landlord. The lease will outline important information around how much your rent is per month, when to pay your rent, what is included in rent and your landlords contact information. Be sure to obtain a copy of your lease. Your landlord will require that you pay first and last month's rent and sometimes a key deposit.

A word about leases

When you are interested in a unit and are looking to rent it, it is always advisable to sign a lease. Ontario has introduced a standard tenancy agreement that landlord should be using. Please click here to view the standard lease form. A lease, is a contract between you and the landlord, it confirms that you are renting the unit and has valuable information within the document. Information includes, date to move-in, amount of rent, date rents to be paid, landlords contact information and what services are included. Once a lease has been signed be sure to receive a copy of the lease and maintain for your records.

Your Rights as a Tenant

Tenant Responsibilities

It is important to understand that your landlord has expectations to have the rent paid on time, for you to take care of the unit and to uphold the lease agreement. As a tenant it is a good idea to try to develop a friendly relationship with your neighbor and be a great neighbor.

Know your rights

The Residential Tenancies Act (RTA) is a Provincial housing law that sets out the relationship between a tenant and the landlord. As a tenant that falls under the RTA, it is very important for you to understand your rights. If you have any questions around your tenancy and the RTA contact the Landlord and Tenant Board or your local legal clinic can help to provide direction and guidance.

What if things go wrong?

If you do have an issue with your landlord or with the unit, it is important to communicate to your landlord first to try and resolve the any issues. The landlord may not be aware of maintenance that is required or other issues that may be going on. Keep a record of conversations, texts or emails and take pictures when there are maintenance issues. If the issues are not getting resolved, you can contact your local legal clinic.

Moving out

When moving out of your unit, be sure to provide your landlord with written notice of the date that you will vacate your unit. If you want to move out of your unit before your lease is over, you will have to break your lease. Start by talking with your landlord to come to an agreement. If this is not possible, you will need to consider subletting your unit or an assignment. It is important to understand what your responsibilities are under both circumstances.
