UNDERGRADUATE STUDIES

ARCHAEOLOGY

The Emphasis in Archaeology will not be available to students registering at the university for the first time in 2011-2012 or in subsequent years. E-Mail: archaeology@trentu.ca

Web: www.trentu.ca/archaeology

Program Coordinators

Chair of Ancient History & Classics Chair of Anthropology

The Archaeology program is an interdisciplinary program focused on the study of the human past through the material record. Students will be exposed to comparative world prehistory, archaeological field methods and laboratory techniques, and the archaeology of specific regions (Old World and New World). Degree options provide students with basic training in the practical and theoretical aspects of archaeological research in Anthropology and in Classics. Current areas of academic expertise are the archaeology, ancient art, and architecture of the Americas, Europe, and the pre-Classical and Classical Mediterranean world.

Notes

- Students are strongly advised to plan course selection carefully in order to acquire needed prerequisites and to prepare for graduate school or careers in different specialties. Advising information is available on the Archaeology program website.
- Students are required to gain relevant archaeological field and/or laboratory experience. They are encouraged to take one of two existing field courses, ANTH 3000Y or AHCL 3850Y, which are normally offered in the summer. Those who are unable to take one of these courses may substitute ANTH 3150Y, which is normally offered during the regular school year. Alternatively, students may register in a field school or lab methods course at another university by obtaining a Letter of Permission from the Office of the Registrar prior to registering in the course. See p. 22, 2011-2012 Academic Calendar for additional details.
- Students who already have extensive field and/or laboratory experience (such as from previous archaeological employment) should consult with the program coordinator, who may consider waiving the degree requirement for a field or lab course. At a minimum, students would normally have to have the equivalent of four weeks of full-time work in the field and/or lab (i.e., 160 hours total). If such a waiver is approved, the student will need to substitute an additional course, with the coordinator's approval, in order to meet the total number of required courses.
- Courses fulfilling University science course requirements for the B.Sc. are marked (Sc) in the individual course descriptions.
- Courses fulfilling the core 10.0 credits of the degree may not simultaneously satisfy the distribution requirements related to Categories A-D.
- There is no joint-major program, General program, or minor in Archaeology.
